

Five Dispositions for a World on the Move

What habits of mind, heart, and dispositions are necessary to live together in a world on the move?

Understand perspectives own and others' empathically

- Understand and value oneself
- Empathize with others, honoring their dignity, seeking to understand their perspectives
- Recognize, value, and manage complex emotions, identities, and influences

Inquire about human migration with care and nuance

- Exhibit care and curiosity about our shared human experience of migration
- Reason with carefully-treated and diverse sources of evidence
- Form informed and ethical personal positions

Communicate across difference, building relationships

- Listen empathically and mindfully
- Express with purpose, audience, and context in mind
- Appreciate and reflect upon respectful and inclusive dialogue

Recognize Inequities in human experiences and migration

- Recognize inequities in various forms
- Understand one's own position vis a vis inequity.
- Envision inclusive and sustainable societies

Take action to foster inclusive & sustainable societies

- Recognize our circles of care and influence
- Employ understanding, voice, and action to foster equitable & inclusive societies
- Reflect and revise our actions

